Bmobile launches VoLTE

BMOBILE announced yesterday that it has become the first mobile provider in Trinidad and Tobago to allow customers to talk and surf simultaneously with the introduction of Voice over LTE (VoLTE).

'VoLTE leverages the power of LTE networks to revolutionise the customer experience with crystal-clear voice quality, faster call connections, and the ability to enjoy uninterrupted internet browsing during calls. This means no more choosing between browsing on your mobile phone or taking an important call-bmobile customers can do both effortlessly,' it stated.

'At bmobile, we promised to do things differently by delivering what matters most to our customers. Today, I am proud to say we are fulfilling that promise,' said Kent Western, chief executive officer of TSTT.

'Our VoLTE technology sets a new standard for mobile communication locally, offering clearer calls, quicker connections, and a more reliable overall experience. We have listened to feedback, particularly as it relates to dropped calls and the need, at times, to prematurely end a voice call to download pictures on WhatsApp and use other applications, so we have taken action. This achievement underscores our commitment to improving connectivity and enhancing the experience customers have on our network.'

In addition to enhancing call quality and reliability, the launch of VoLTE allows bmobile to optimise network capacity by repurposing spectrum for newer technologies, streamlining operations, and reducing reliance on legacy infrastructure, it stated.
